

Women Police Officers Provide Swimming Pool

The prevention and treatment of delinquency will be carried out by the County Women's Peace Officers Association by providing a swimming pool at the Las Palmas School.

A fund drive for the pool is now under way, according to officer Maxine Hahn of the Torrance Police Department. She is serving as overall chairman.

Mrs. Hahn is the first vice president of the Women's Peace Officers'.

The Honorable Mildred Lillie, justice of the District Court of Appeal and Honorable Fred Miller, Judge of the Superior Court have been drafted as legal advisers for the campaign.

Las Palmas School is the only facility of its kind in Los Angeles County, a school for badly disturbed, delinquent girls who have come to the attention of law enforcement.

The youngsters, between 13 and 17 years of age, confined to the school, are "extremely troubled children," according to Mrs. Dorothy Kirby, the Las Palmas director.

Because of their emotional problems, Mrs. Kirby considers a pool a therapeutic device rather than a purely recreational facility.

Police women, women deputies and probation officers know that a girl who has finished a good swim is not likely to pace the floor all night and cry.

In a pool a girl will learn self control because if she ignores directions, she may sink or get a face full of water.

There are only 99 girls at Las Palmas. The institution is based on this small number so that there is a better chance of helping the youngsters.

Only girls with an IQ of 85 or above are admitted. The school must be selective. As a result, only children are taken who personnel feel can be helped.

Mrs. Hahn in explaining the interest by the women peace officers' interest in the school and the building of the pool said she hopes every community in Los Angeles County will have a part in the project. She pointed out Las Palmas cares for girls from every area of the county.

Mrs. Hahn said that she believes the public will receive a clearer picture of the swimming pool campaign because law enforcement women are sponsoring the drive.

Highway Patrol Explains Signals

The California Highway Patrol will accelerate its enforcement emphasis against motorists who impede traffic by driving too slowly in the left-hand lane on multi-lane highways.

Bradford M. Crittenden, commissioner, said the campaign is in response to a legislative resolution passed during the 1962 session which states that failure to observe the law which requires slower moving vehicles to keep right "constitutes a major contribution to the high death toll and ever increasing accident rate."

The resolution also directed the patrol to take the necessary steps to ensure enforcement.

"The law provides that vehicles moving slower than the normal flow of traffic shall be driven in the right-hand lane or as close to the right-hand edge of the road as practicable, except when passing other vehicles, or in preparing to make a left turn," the commissioner said.

"Thus at any speed short of 65 mph maximum limit, you should not cruise in the left-hand lane if other vehicles are moving faster than your car.

"One simple method of determining if you should move is: When cars are passing on your right, you are wrong. Move to the right and let faster traffic pass to the left," the commissioner said.
